- Industry 4.0 is changing the role of humans in the overall processes. New areas of work are being created in which the production processes flow together. Humans and robots work hand in hand in the future. And this process is intensifying all the time, with both sides increasingly converging to form a single team.
- At the same time, there are louder calls for Industry 4.0 to focus more strongly on people. The two elements can be harmonized by basing practicable and value-oriented concepts directly on interaction between humans and machines.
